

Our mission at the Jamestown Community Learning Council is to strengthen the capacity of families to nurture, support and provide for their child's academic development, emotional growth and physical well-being by establishing effective relationships between home and school.

Your child is born to learn and YOU are your child's first and most important teacher.

WHY SHOULD I JOIN?

Being a parent is more than a full-time job—it's constantly making important decisions and seeking out the best options for your family while balancing all other aspects of life. Parents as Teachers (PAT) is a free program offered by the Jamestown Community Learning Council designed to strengthen your capacity to help your child reach their full potential.

You and your child will enjoy playing and learning together while developing strong family bonds that will help your child be happy and successful their whole life.

YOU are your child's first and most important teacher. We're here to help you feel confident in that.

Benefits:

- Become more involved in your child's development and education
- Bond with your child through engaging activities
- Group activities to link you with other parents
- Connections to community resources you or your child may find beneficial

Here's what some of our families have said:

"It has been encouraging for both my daughter and me. It bolstered her confidence in learning and mine in helping her learn."

"This program has brought activities for my child and I to do together. It has helped us bond and strengthen our relationship."

HOW DOES IT WORK?

Your home visitor will meet with your family each month. They will partner with you to meet your family's individual schedule and needs.

Here are some activities you can expect as part of your family's program:

- Fun games and activities for you and your child to enjoy together
- Explore creative ways to support your child's development
- Check-ins to make sure your child's health and development are on track
- Discuss any specific issues or topics you'd like to address
- Assist with any communication you need with your child's school
- Opportunities to join group activities such as storytime, science nights and more!
